

I believe the problem of "orphan works" is a serious one. The artistic heritage of our nation is threatened by the insane expansion of copyright law, which makes it impossible to curate and preserve historic works. I believe that the current copyright regime is unconstitutional, and that the term of copyright should be returned to 14 years, with extension to a maximum of 28 years only on request from the original creator, who must be living at the time of the request.

Regards, David D. Lewis