I know of two individuals who had an extremely hard time reaching copy right holders of inventions that they knew they could improve upon or had better ideas of new products that were similar to those that were on the drawing table. How can a new idea get over to the public when original copyright holders can't be tracked down for simple communication purposes? Please help the inventors of the future bring their ideas to the forefront! Please help us & the persons of the future by getting rid of Orphan Works.
