Orphan Works is a GREAT idea! You should have done this a long time ago.

I'm an editor of Wikipedia, the open content, multi-lingual, online encyclopedia. There are lots and lots of images we would like to use, but can't, because it's impossible to track down the copyright holders. This doesn't benefit the copyright holders or the public at all. Copyright on orphan works can hardly be seen as promoting the progress of science and art because it stifles the development of public resources like Wikipedia.
