We handle the image detection and monitoring of most of the world leading stock agencies and a sustaining member of PACA and CEPIC.

Our image recognition technology can work also in the opposite way (to what we do in web monitoring) and provide immediate answers for people regarding who own the material they would like to use.

If the suggested corporation shall be approved, the user will upload a digital image to the system and will get en email reply about who owns this image (in case the image is part of our reference database). We will coordinate our effort with n.wolff from PACA so we can start with the stock photography collections and then add the library of congress files and others. We might not be able to provide a 100% solution since we will not have 1005 of the files as reference database, however, we will be able to provide a "best effort" method for people who would like to clear their image they are about to use (relevant for video as well).

All the best;
